About the CORRIDOR JAZZ PROJECT

The most rewarding thing about the Corridor Jazz Project is seeing the impact it has on the students who participate. You might think that after so many years, the program would be old hat to the students, but after the recording sessions each year, I nearly always receive a few emails from directors talking about how much fun the students have at the sessions. Now, most of that might be the postrecording trip to Culver's and getting to skip AP Psych, but I'm always struck by the smiles and laughter that Jeff Schmatt catches with his great photos. I know we have a lot of fun watching the students, and the energy and talent they bring to the sessions sustains us through four pretty long days in the studio. That joy definitely comes through when you listen to the album, and if you're lucky enough to be at one or both of our concerts, I know you'll experience it in person. How lucky are we to live in a place with such talented students and passionate educators?

I'd also like to recognize a family that has been important to many arts organizations in Iowa and to KCCK in particular, and whose impact continues to underpin our efforts. During their lifetime, John and Susan Strauss of Iowa City supported countless non-profits in our region, notably Hancher

John, Joan, and Susan Strauss

Auditorium, the Englert, Summer of the Arts, and KCCK. When we began the Corridor Jazz Project in 2008, John and Susan were early supporters.

John passed away in 2014, Susan in 2023. I'm happy to say that a bequest from Sue's will to KCCK will help fund our education programs, notably the Corridor Jazz Project, into the foreseeable future. Now that KCCK no longer receives federal funding, gifts like this are what will enable us to continue to operate and provide programs like this. We're grateful to John, Sue, and their daughter Joan for believing in KCCK and the students who will benefit from their generosity for many years to come!

Concert Etiquette

We understand this may be just about the longest concert you've ever attended. In fact, tonight we'll present more groups than some music festivals do in an entire weekend!

If you've seen all you want to see, don't feel bad for taking off before the end of the night. If the bands you want to see happen to be at opposite ends of the schedule, feel free to leave and return.

All we ask is that you wait for the current performance to end before moving around and to be polite to those other patrons near your seat.

Jazz 88.3 KCCCK Enriching the Community

Jazz 88.3 KCCCK is a noncommercial, educational FM radio station operated by Kirkwood Community College. KCCCK enriches the cultural environment of the Cedar Rapids and Iowa City communities through a variety of on-air programs and community outreach activities. Many of these programs center on the promotion and preservation of jazz, America's only indigenous musical art form.

KCCCK programs a rich on-air schedule of jazz, blues, and related music every day and produces programs designed to enhance the listener's appreciation of this unique art music.

In addition to high-quality on-air programs, KCCCK brings jazz to the Corridor community in a variety of venues:

- Since 1988, KCCCK has sponsored and organized Jazz Under the Stars, a free concert series designed to bring exposure to both professional and student jazz performers in our region, all in a free, family-friendly atmosphere.

- KCCCK produces several concerts and programs each year. These include an annual broadcast of the main stage performances at the Iowa City Jazz Festival, along with other concert broadcasts, including student bands from the U of I, Kirkwood, and others.

The Corridor Jazz Project is just one of several education programs KCCCK has designed to bring jazz to young people. Others include:

- Schoolhouse Jazz, which encompasses narration, performance, and student participation to help elementary students understand jazz as a musical form, and also its enormous impact on American culture and history.
- Middle School Jazz Band Camp, a weeklong campus experience for students entering grades seven through nine, which brings young band students into contact with peers from other schools and directors from area high schools and colleges to enrich their middle school instrumental experience and help prepare them for high school band.

Iowa's Jazz Station reaches an audience of about 17,000 people each week. Over 15,000 more attend events or are served by our jazz education programs.

With the demise of federal funding, KCCCK now relies solely on community support to operate. Please consider a tax-deductible contribution to fund this unique station. You can also help by encouraging your company to be a KCCCK sponsor!

APRIL JAZZ APPRECIATION MONTH STUDENT DJ SCHEDULE

Listen to KCCCK during April Jazz Appreciation Month as students from each Corridor jazz band will be guest DJs! Students will spin tunes they've enjoyed or played in school and talk about why they play and listen to jazz. And they never EVER try to embarrass their director! Honest.

All guest DJ shows will be at 4 p.m.

Scan the QR code, or find the schedule at www.kccck.org/studentdjs.
